

Look, to not have money is a suffocating feeling, but to not have it in college or while you're starting your family is one thing, but to not have it in retirement, it's no bueno. According to the Center of Retirement Research since 2010, each year their index is shown that anywhere between 47% to 51% of households will not be able to maintain their current lifestyle in retirement.

And wow, this is so heartbreaking to me. It doesn't have to be this way. It just seems like that with proper planning and a solid investment strategy, all this can be preventable. So as always, we'd recommend that you talk to a trusted advisor and try and get on track to make sure that retirement is not a suffocating feeling.
